COMMENTS ON THE STATE E-RATE COORDINATORS' ALLIANCE PETITION FOR CLARIFICATION AND/OR WAIVER OF E-RATE RULES CONCERNING TECHNOLOGY PLAN CREATION AND APPROVAL UNDER THE SCHOOLS AND LIBRARIES UNIVERSAL SERVICE SUPPORT MECHANISM

E-Rate Central submits these Comments on behalf of the New York State Education Department, for whom it serves as the State E-rate coordinator, in response to the Public Notice released April 25, 2007. The Public Notice, DA 07-1846, seeks comment on the State E-Rate Coordinators' Alliance ("SECA") petition for clarification or waiver of E-rate rules concerning technology plan creation and/or approval under the Schools and Libraries Support Mechanism (commonly known as the "E-rate" program).

Specifically, the SECA petition suggests that any school or library applicant operating under an approved technology plan at the time it files a Form 470 be deemed to be compliant with the FCC's pre-bidding planning rules for the forthcoming funding year. Less broadly, but equally importantly, the SECA petition suggests that statewide and/or consortium applicants be permitted to rely upon the currently approved technology plan status of their members during the same time frame.

E-Rate Central believes that SECA's technology plan creation and approval proposals represent a practical and well-balanced clarification of the FCC's planning rules with regard to the status of an applicant's technology plan prior to the start of each year's application cycle, typically beginning with the filing a Form 470.

Discussion:

FCC rules require that a technology plan for non-basic telephone service exist prior to the filing of a Form 470 and that a technology plan be approved prior to the start of services (typically July 1st of the funding year). Until recently, however, the focus of the enforcement efforts by USAC, as well as the institutional technology plan support provided by the states, has been on the approval requirement. This focus changed over the past two years when USAC instituted a program of Form 486 technology plan reviews checking, not only that applicants actually had approved technology plans (as certified in their Form 486s), but that they could document that they had created a technology plan covering that funding year as of the date they had filed their Form 470s, typically the preceding fall.

The focus on pre-Form 470 technology plan creation was problematic for a number of applicants. In particular:

- USAC had previously provided little guidance on what constituted satisfactory plan "creation" or that an applicant would be required to document the date a plan was "written."
- FCC rules specified only that an applicant have a technology plan prior to filing a Form 470, not that the plan must specifically address the upcoming funding year. ¹
- Most of the affected applicants had been operating under approved plans at the time they filed their Form 470s covering most of the services for which they planned to apply. Those with plan approvals expiring the following June knew that their plans needed to be updated, but planned to do so in the spring.
- Technology plan approvers in many states had organized programs tailored to publicizing the need for updated plans and reviewing them a process that was also focused on a spring schedule.

¹ The need for greater clarification on technology plan issues was recognized in the FCC's recent Brownsville Order (FCC 07-37) which instructed USAC to develop additional outreach efforts on technology plan requirements.

The end result of these technology plan reviews was a number of funding denials. Attached is a list of over 560 FY 2005 and FY 2006 FRNs that were denied for one of the following comparable reasons:

No technology plan covering the current funding year was in place when the Form 470 was filed. A written technology plan is needed if seeking discounts for more than basic phone service.

A technology plan covering the current funding year was not provided during the course of review. Technology plans are required when applicants apply for more than basic wireless and wireline telephone services.

Documentation indicates that you did not have a written technology plan at the time the Form 470 was filed. FCC rules require applicants to have a written tech plan, at the time the Form 470 is filed, if they are seeking discounts for more than basic phone service.

Without clarification along the lines suggested by SECA, USAC denials of FY 2007 funding are likely to be even more numerous. Since many technology plans are approved for three years, and since FY 2006 is the ninth year of the program, we expect that substantially more than one-third of all currently approved plans will expire on June 30, 2007. If USAC holds to its premise that all these expiring plans had to have written updates last fall, prior to Form 470 submissions, we project that denials based on FY 2007 Form 486 reviews will be much higher than in either of the two preceding years.

One particularly disturbing aspect of these denials is that they resulted from a randomly-applied enforcement of USAC's interpretation of the FCC's pre-Form 470 technology plan requirements. It is our understanding that only a relatively small percentage of Form 486 submissions were subjected to technology plan reviews. We suspect that a significant portion of applicants selected for review, with existing plan approvals set to expire in June just prior to the funding year, were denied funding, while a much larger number of applicants in a similar position, but not reviewed, were approved. This is not a fair process.

Although USAC confirmation of actual technology plan approvals is also based on sampling (including the same Form 486 reviews), we believe that enforcement and compliance with the plan approval requirement is much broader — and, therefore, is much fairer. In large part, this is because the plan approval process itself is widely supported and complemented by the various state approval organizations. No such broad state support is available — nor is it likely to develop — to monitor and/or encourage compliance with a second technology plan deadline.

Reliance on state technology approval mechanisms is a key strength of SECA's proposal to accept current approvals as indication of applicant compliance with the FCC's pre-Form 470 technology requirement.

It is also a realistic approach that addresses the underlying basis of the requirement, namely that planning should precede funding. As a practical matter, most changes in technology strategy are evolutionary rather than revolutionary. Many of the services supported by E-rate — particularly telecommunications, Internet access, and basic maintenance — are of an ongoing nature that are likely to be covered in an existing technology plan. Nevertheless, to account for technical changes, a currently approved plan is required to include an evaluation component which, to quote SLD reference sources, "enables the school or library to monitor progress toward the specified goals and make mid-course corrections in response to new developments and opportunities and they arise."

Conclusion:

E-Rate Central fully supports SECA's technology plan creation and approval proposals as a practical and realistic interpretation of the FCC's current technology planning rules consistent with the institutionalized systems implemented by the states to support the underlying approval process.

Assuming the FCC agrees, E-Rate Central stresses the importance of the speedy adoption of these proposals to avoid wholesale denials of FY 2007 applicant funding in a year characterized by a higher than normal need for technology plan updates.

Respectfully submitted:
